STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. LIEBERMAN:

S. 798. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow small business employers certain credits against income tax, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation, the Productivity, Opportunity, and Prosperity Act of 2001, that I believe will add some needed POP to our economy and that must be an integral component of any strategy to extend our historic economic growth.

The primary goal of the Productivity, Opportunity, and Prosperity Act is to protect, stimulate and expand economic growth. Government's role is not to create jobs but to help create the environment in which the private sector will create jobs. This legislation helps to create the right context for private sector growth by providing incentives for investment in training, technology, and small entrepreneurial firms. These investments are critical to economic growth and the creation of jobs and wealth.

The Productivity, Opportunity, and Prosperity Act of 2001 is a tax package with a purpose. And that purpose is, above all else, to stimulate private sector economic growth, to raise the tide that lifts the lot of all Americans. In the spirit of the "New Economy," where the fundamentals of our economy have changed through entrepreneurship and innovation, this package includes business tax incentives that will spur the real drivers of growth: innovation, investment, a skilled workforce, and productivity.

The first component of this bill is a 30 percent tax credit for companies that invest in remedial education for their employees. Many companies today recognize that a skilled workforce is critical to success and they are eager to invest continuously in their employees. However, too often those companies seeking to upgrade worker skills are having to first make sizeable investments to simply make up for the skill deficits produced by the K-12 education system. For example, in my home state of Connecticut, I am aware of one small manufacturer with 25 employees that will train 20 of them in English as a Second Language at a cost of up to $15,000. That is a significant investment and commitment by that company. Because too many workers did not learn the basic math, reading, and language skills in school, companies have to fix these deficiencies first, before they can train their workers on more advanced skills. This credit will help to offset those investments.

The bill's second component is a Small Business Digital Divide Tax Credit. It would create a 10 percent tax credit for small businesses, those with fewer than 100 employees, to encourage investment in information technology, for example servers, network hardware, initial broadband hookup, PCs, and e-Business software. This credit is critical for two reasons. First, because there is truly a small business digital divide in this country. Small firms are lagging in the productivity growth that has driven the economic boom of the late 90s. While small businesses account for 40 percent of our economy and 60 percent of the new jobs, less than one-third of them are wired to the Internet today. Those that are wired have grown 46 percent faster than their counterparts who are unplugged. A recent study by the National Association of Manufacturers, NAM, shows that those small manufacturers surveyed averaged only about 2 percent of their sales over internet and less than 1 percent were in the advanced stages of e-commerce. Without expanding productivity improvements to small businesses, we cannot hope to sustain the
